Dear colleagues,

Pain during sex is a major clinical problem that, although frequent, stays under the radar. Many men and women suffer from the problem but don’t go and look for help to solve it. Also, we as caregivers often deny or circumvent the problem, which does not help either.

We are preparing a volume of this Journal focusing on the differential aspects of this enigmatic clinical problem. Therefore, I ask you to send your scientific contribution, either as a fundamental or clinical research paper, clinical case or as an opinion statement. I would welcome your contributions!

Possible subjects are:

Social barriers to talk about sexual intercourse pain problems;

Penetration pain when attempting sexual intercourse;

Genital mutilation and painful intercourse;

Menopause and painful intercourse;

Role of pelvic floor reeducation in painful sexual intercourse;

History of unwanted sex and vaginism; Management of vulvodynia;

Endometriosis and sex; Sex in pregnancy;

Sexuologist view on painful intercourse.

Please let us make a fantastic volume to help each other improving our care for these poor women suffering from acts that should give pleasure.

Waiting anxiously for your contributions.
